DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-2 and 5-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by U.S.

Patent Number 6,185,213 to Katsube et al..

3. As to claims 1 and 5, Katsube teaches a packet switch control mechanism and method for controlling the selective coupling of digital communication packets presented to virtual circuit input ports of a packet switch to virtual circuit output ports thereof (col. 5, lines 44-67) comprising: a plurality of packet analyzers, a respective one of which is operative to analyze contents of a packet presented thereto and to provide an output representative of whether or not said contents of said packet contains prescribed information (col. 9, lines 14-49); and a packet distribution controller coupled to said plurality of packet analyzers and being operative, in response to a respective packet analyzer supplying an output representative that the contents of the packet coupled thereto contains said prescribed information, to couple said respective packet to a selected virtual circuit output port of said switch, but otherwise not coupling said respective packet of a virtual circuit output port of said switch (col. 9, lines 14-49).

4. As to claims 2 and 6, Katsube teaches a packet switch control mechanism and method wherein said packet distribution controller is operative, in response to any packet analyzer of a prescribed order of said plurality of packet analyzers supplying said output representative that contents of the packet coupled thereto contains said prescribed information, to cause said respective packet to be coupled to a selected virtual circuit output port of said switch, and to terminate further coupling of said packet to any remaining ones of said prescribed order of said plurality of packet analyzers (col. 9, lines 14-49).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 3-4 and 7-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S.

Patent Number 6,185,213 to Katsube et al. in view of U.S. Patent Number 6,775,290 to Merchant et al..

7. As claims 3 and 7, Katsube teaches the mechanism and method of claims 1 and 5 however Katsube does not explicitly teach discarding a packet.

Merchant teaches a packet distribution controller operative, in response to no packet analyzer having a configuration function for which there is an associated virtual circuit port of said switch, to cause said packet to be discarded (col. 5, lines 29-53).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the Computer Networking art at the time of the invention to combine the teachings of Katsube regarding the analysis of packets with the teachings of Merchant regarding the discarding of packets because discarding packets that do not match reduces memory use (Merchant, col. 5, lines 29-53).

8. As to claims 4 and 8, Katsube teaches a method wherein a plurality of packet analyzers comprise a prescribe having configuration functions for there are associated ports of a switch, wherein a packet distribution controller is operative to supply an output and to couple a respective packet to a selected virtual port (col. 9, lines 14-49).
